Ever wonder what it would be like to actually peer into someone's mind and see how they perceive you as you speak to them? If you're a boss, for instance, how is that employee viewing you when you nonchalantly utter, "By the way, I need your report on my desk by Friday morning." Or, as a parent, what do your kids envision when you look down wearing your sternest poker-face and declare, "No staying out till midnight - period." And what about your spouse? What kind of mental images do you conjure up in his or her mind with, "Look, I've had it with these continual arguments!" Impossible to see inside someone else's head, you say? Not for author Ray DiZazzo in his unique new book, THE CLARITY FACTOR. Written in a fresh conversational style, DiZazzo uses the vivid dreamscape of finance supervisor Gloria Donovan to let us (and her) glimpse how people view her in a series of important business and personal conversations. For Gloria this "gift" of sorts is not always easy to deal with, but it certainly is an eye-opener!
